Attractive scale contrasts à la WIKING! The Fendt 1050 Vario appears with impressive twin tyres on both a 1:87 and 1:32 scale – the charm of the models could hardly be more apparent. Anyone who values the 1:32 precision scale will be impressed by the 116 CS Claas Commandor with C660 forager headers. The combine harvester is the largest harvest time modern classic of the 1990s and extends the WIKING 1:32 scale agricultural range to include a retrospective. Of course, the new collection year kicks off with other new items on a 1:87 scale: The VW T1 appears as a Samba bus with contemporary, rolled-back sun roof – just like when it used to travel through the Alpine passes to the Italian Riviera. The 1970s are represented by the Unimog U 406 in THW livery, the MAN with skip and the Volvo F89 as a Swiss "Migros" refrigerated semi-trailer. The MAN F 90 with loading crane and tandem trailer is on special duty for the fire brigade, along with the DAF own-brand towing vehicle. Bang up to date is the Mercedes-Benz E-Class S213 in an exclusive version with enclosed roof. The N-gauge Magirus box semi-trailer evokes the "Coop" shop opposite of times long past.

Multifaceted look back at the golden area of WIKING classics! From old moulds, the traditional model makers are revitalising the sporty Porsche 356 convertible, the elegant DKW Limousine and the Unimog S as the fire engine of those days. In the authentic appearance for the time it was produced, the Ford Continental in bicolour design enters the range – the pastel colours of the paintwork against the white, folded back roof evoking the golden era of the impressive USA coupés. The intricately decorated VW T1 (type 2) appears in a "Dujardin" branded design and WIKING has given the large type D 40 L Deutz tractor a modest ornamental trim. The 1950s omnibus that made WIKING an unforgettable part of all model railways that year has a contemporary feel. The Büssing Trambus in the colours of the "Deutsche Bundesbahn" receives a contemporary design on both the lower chassis part as well as the upper part, which used to be a transparent insert but is now in contrasting colours true to the original. The construction materials vehicle in the "Klöckner" livery, which is being towed by the Magirus 135 D 11 FS, is carrying a load of steel. For the many WIKING fans of the historical accessories, the traditional model makers have put together another accessory pack with numerous items such as draw bars and trailer couplings. The Mercedes-Benz O 305 in the later colours of the "Deutsche Bundesbahn" rounds off the year's initial model upgrades for the fans of the N-gauge.
